Graphic HMI and Gmail

Summary

Google has accounts restricted for third party app/device access. This tech note describes the process to unlock an account to interact with a new device.

Solution

To summarize, you need to login to a special Gmail link (see below). Then access the email account within 10 minutes with the application you want to be allowed (send an email from your Graphic HMI). Google will then remember the device and allow access to your account in the future.

NOTE: Google accounts usually show devices authorized to use the account, but details of the HMI are not captured by Google. The account will continue to let the HMI access Gmail.
